

LEARNING places

Bryanston Square is running a limited number of Learning Places briefing sessions for Architects, to bring your team up to date on what we are telling thousands of headteachers and five thousand young teachers on the future of Learning Places.

Over lunch, during the day or in the evening, our two hour session we will help you understand:

- How learning is and can be delivered
- How education and schools are changing & how this can be demonstrated in your designs
- What we currently advise in respect to school design
- The current thinking in design from a school's viewpoint

Our team comprises some highly experienced trainers, facilitators and coaches with broad experience from a range of sectors, who regularly present to and for bodies such as the National College for School Leadership (as part of the NPQH and SLICT programmes), TDA Development (formerly the National Remodelling Team), and FastTrack.

Quotes on Previous Sessions
